

POLITICAL SCIENCE MINOR

Minor Requirements

A minor in political science requires five (5) courses chosen from the offerings of the political science program. Political science students regularly take part in various governmental internship and extramural programs, including the Washington Semester.

Courses in political science engage students in thinking critically about fundamental causes and standards of political behavior. Students find this kind of education helpful in various careers, including government work, law, teaching, and political research.